Writing About Miami (WAM)

Reciting of Class Pledge

I am not everyone, but I am someone.
I cannot write everything, but I can write something!
What I can write, by the grace of the universe,
I will freely write as a means to become the best
Person that I can be for me, my household,
my community and the world.
I have something to say because I am somebody.
I am freely writing myself into existence.
I am a Viking Freedom Writer

“No one has the right to take your pen away from you!”
-Dr. Precious Symonette

For the past 6 years, I have been teaching in Miami Gardens, Florida at Miami Norland Senior High School. Fortunately, I had been successful with getting my students to improve their writing skills and to express themselves about a variety of topics. Nevertheless, I noticed that most of my students didn't really want to volunteer, or they failed to see the importance of community activism. Thus, I wanted to help my students to change their perspective, to learn more about the historical significance of their respective communities, and to have an active role of helping to improve the state of their neighborhoods. More importantly, I wanted them to consciously work to change the status quo. Two projects that I previously executed, a Teacher Mini Grant, “Viking Freedom Writers iWrite Movement” and a Disseminator Grant, “Slamming My Story” were proven to be successful, I decided to create the project, “Writing About Miami” to inspire and motivate my students to be more civically aware and active within their communities.

Many of my students felt as if earning community service hours was a burden. Due to this mindset, many of my students only wanted to get their community service hours at school; they didn't have any interest of going outside of the school campus. I wanted to my students to learn about the historical importance of Miami, to write about their acquired knowledge and perspectives in a variety of formats, and to create service learning projects that would help them to earn their community service hours and to be more civically involved.

Initially, the Writing About Miami (WAM) project was a part of a Teacher Mini Grant I wrote, “Viking Freedom Writers iWrite Movement” that involved 150 students at Miami Norland Senior High School. I came up with this project when my students informed me that they didn't know a lot about the history of Miami. I know the importance of learning about history. For this reason, I wanted to locate and create opportunities where my students would be able to learn, write, and create service learning projects related to these respective historical sites, within their respective communities.

This project has benefited my students in so many ways and has encouraged them to be more civically engaged within their respective communities. Although my students are coping with several social issues, while residing in low socioeconomic communities, the WAM Project helped my students to understand that learning and volunteering in their communities can help to improve the quality of their lives. This project helped me to help my students to improve their academics and increase their community involvement.

In 2018, 96% of my students received a passing grade on the International Cambridge AICE: General Paper Exam. By the end of the academic year, my students excel on their respective annual assessments, and are writing and advocating about issues that directly relates to them to help to make the world a better place. Students learn the importance of experiential learning and how to evolve into culturally responsive and respectful citizens.

Students received in-class presentations about historical sites located in Miami. After the in-class presentations, they are required to conduct research pertaining to the respective historical sites. Students were then given an opportunity of visiting the historical site and writing about what they learned, their experience, and how they may feel. Afterward, students were placed in groups and created and participated in a Service Learning Project.

Once students have brainstormed, planned, and assigned roles, they began reaching out to organize their Service Learning Project. The students are communicating, critically thinking, caring about each other, collaborating, and using creativity. More importantly, they are creating a sense of community among themselves and functioning as role models for their peers around the school campus because they are demonstrating how leaders conduct themselves in the world at large.

The “Writing About Miami” project is needed because students need to learn transferable skills related to public speaking, writing, and networking skills that will help them in all areas of their lives. Additionally, it is imperative that students learn, practice, and promote tolerance, acceptance, and unity as a means for the world to become a better place. Overall, this project helped students to become conscious about their respective communities and civically involved.

Project Description Objectives:

- Demonstrate critical reading and writing skills
- Analyze primary and secondary texts both orally and in writing
- Use writing as a tool for inquiry into personal, social, historical, cultural and other themes and topics within the humanities.
- Complete an intensive writing course of assignments demonstrating college level skills.
- Close reading of texts from several critical approaches, including formalist, biographical, cultural, historical, gender, and others.
- Develop refined research strategies, adaptation of thesis statements, and shaped written responses considering chosen critical approaches (lenses), application in a wider global context to student writing.
- Examine text from the standpoint of a given genre's elements and conventions as they represent a broader human strategy for finding meaning and pursuing universal goals.
- Students will be a demonstration of positivity and productivity of public education.
- Students will educate their peers and other stakeholders about societal issues.
- Students will be educated and empowered to create positive change in their community and surrounding areas.
- Students will communicate and network with parents and the community to create solutions to societal issues.
